FOR ETHEREUM

Ethereum was originally described in a newspaper of Vitalik Buterin, Bitcoin developer in the end of 2013, with the goal of building distributed applications. Buterin argues that Bitcoin needs a development on scripting language application. Being unable to reach an agreement with the Bitcoin development team, he proposed to develop a new platform with a more general scripting language.

The initial four members of Ethereum were Vitalik Buterin, Mihai Alisie, Anthony Di Iorio and Charles Hoskinson. The official development of the Ethereum software project started in early 2014 through a Swiss company called Ethereum Switzerland GmbH (EthSuisse). A Swiss non-profit organization called the Ethereum Foundation is also established. The development of Ethereum was sponsored by online crowds in July and August 2014, with participants buying Ethereum in other digital currencies such as bitcoin.

Despite Ethereum's initial praise for technical innovation, there are still doubts about its safety and scalability.
